"During the past 12 months we've seen a huge number of successes, both in terms of attendance and engagement, but also in the individual journeys of our children, young people, and families, who have grown in confidence, built support networks, and begun advocating for the needs of survivors in the individual spheres, communities, and the wider systems they are engaged in. By providing holistic support for wider families' needs, we've been able to improve outcomes for the children, young people, and families referred to us and see family relationships improve and children take major strides towards healing and recovery."
