"Throughout our work with children and young people affected by domestic abuse, we have seen a range of meaningful changes and developments that reflect the value of early, consistent support. One of the most significant areas of progress has been in behavioural change. Children who were initially withdrawn, anxious, or displaying challenging behaviours have begun to engage more positively, both in sessions and in their daily environments. This shift often comes as a result of feeling heard, validated, and given practical tools to manage their emotions."
